

ACS Dismisses Lawsuit against Duncan Solutions

PRESS RELEASE. For Immediate Distribution

February 18, 2010 | Milwaukee, Wisconsin

On January 28, 2010, Affiliated Computer Services, Inc. (“ACS”), a competitor of Duncan Solutions, Inc. (“Duncan”), dismissed its lawsuit against Duncan. ACS filed suit against Duncan in Texas federal court on August 19, 2009, alleging that Duncan had acted to divert ACS emails to Duncan. In 2007, Duncan and ACS configured a system to allow employees of the two companies to collaborate on a project. ACS had formed the view that the system was configured to give Duncan access to ACS emails

In addition to providing information demonstrating ACS’s allegations were unfounded, Duncan consented to a review of its systems by a third party of ACS’s choosing. This third party found no evidence to support ACS’s claims leading to the dismissal of the lawsuit.

Duncan places the utmost importance on the integrity of its systems due to the sensitive data and privacy considerations associated with the business conducted by Duncan. Duncan is pleased that a thorough, independent review supported Duncan’s position.
